When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice; But when a wicked man rules, the people groan. Proverbs 29:2

Month in Review

Q “He who is often rebuked, and hardens his neck, will suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy.

“When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice; but when a wicked man rules, the people groan.

“Whoever loves wisdom makes his father rejoice, but a companion of harlots wastes his wealth.

“The king establishes the land by justice, but he who receives bribes overthrows it.

“A man who flatters his neighbor spreads a net for his feet.

“By transgression an evil man is snared, but the righteous sings and rejoices.

“The righteous considers the cause of the poor, but the wicked does not understand such knowledge.

“Scoffers set a city aflame, but wise men turn away wrath.

“If a wise man contends with a foolish man, whether the fool rages or laughs, there is no peace.

“The bloodthirsty hate the blameless, but the upright seek his well-being.

“A fool vents all his feelings, but a wise man holds them back.

Q “George Orwell, it is well known, saw the corrupting possibilities that flow from the willful distortion of language. This is because language tends to embody collective wisdom and experience.

“What the word ‘marriage’ means we all know very well and have so known so far back as the records of the human race extend.

“On the other hand, resistance to homosexuality extends just about as far back, the disapproval being almost universal. I have heard homosexuality called ‘Greek love.’ Well, Plato – in his ‘Laws’ and his ‘Gorgias’ – regarded homosexual acts as worthy of the death penalty. This universal, or near universal, disapproval cannot be called ‘bigotry.’ It is based upon collective experience and high regard for the institution of marriage.

“Since this negative estimate of homosexual behavior is so nearly universal, it amounts to a sort of vote of mankind existing over many centuries, and it is based upon experience of homosexual behavior in various aspects. Naturally enough, this has been codified in religious teaching.

“If a ruler pays attention to lies, all his servants become wicked.

“The poor man and the oppressor have this in common: The Lord gives light to the eyes of both.”

Q “It makes me smile to hear ‘em tell each other nowadays

The burdens they are bearing, with a child or two to raise.

Of course the cost of living has gone soaring to the sky

And our kids are wearing garments that my parents couldn’t buy.

Now my father wasn’t wealthy, but I never heard him squeal

Because eight of us were sitting at the table every meal.

People fancy they are martyrs if their children number three,

And four or five they reckon makes a large-sized family.

A dozen hungry youngsters at a table I have seen

And their daddy didn’t grumble when they licked the platter clean.

Oh, I wonder how these mothers and these fathers up-to-date

Would like the job of buying little shoes for seven or eight.

We were eight around the table in those happy days back then,

Eight that cleaned our plates of pot-pie and them passed them up again;

“I notice Bill Bradley, Al Gore, John McCain and George W. Bush all oppose homosexual ‘marriage.’ They know what the nation thinks.”

Q “The gay lobby is seeking a trophy, and the target is Dr. Laura Schlessinger. ‘Dr. Laura,’ as she is known, is a radio therapist, dispensing advice to 18 million listeners. For sheer radio popularity, she has only one rival—Rush Limbaugh. An Orthodox Jew, Dr. Laura takes a traditional view of things, including homosexuality. For her troubles, gay groups have made her their Public Enemy Number One. They are campaigning tirelessly to get her off the radio and keep her off television. Conservative groups, more feebly, have risen to her defense. There is no fiercer battle in the culture war today.

“Dr. Laura does not consider herself a gay-hater. She reminds people that she was one of the first radio hosts to take calls from open gays, about gay problems. She stresses compassion toward gays. But she is uncompromising in her opposition to homosexuality and the idea of gay rights. She has called homosexuality ‘a terrible sadness,’ a ‘deviant sexual behavior,’ and most controversially, ‘a biological error.’ She is a firm defender of the traditional family and inveighs freely against the gay political agenda: marriage, adoption, and so on. Worst of all from a gay-activist perspective, she has supported ‘reparative therapy,’ the treatment that seeks to help homosexuals change their sexual ways. She likes to say that radical, politicized gays always try to bully and silence other gays—the ones from whom she enjoys

Eight that needed shoes and stockings, eight to wash and put to bed,

And with mighty little money in the purse,
as I have said,

But with all the care we brought them, and through all the days of stress,

I never heard my father or my mother wish for less.”

Q “Politically, today’s Americans show little desire to launch massive enterprises. They are generally disenchanted with those zealous for radical change, whether it be Hillary Clinton with her ambitious health care plan or Newt Gingrich with his ambitious effort to scale back government. Many thought that when the baby boomer university grads reached the top of the power pyramid, they would bring their youthful ideological style with them, but just the opposite has come to pass. Ideologies of right and left are out of favor, and utopianism is practically extinct. Americans are more likely to see politics as a series of humble improvisations enacted with cautious hopes and some anxiety. That is to say, America is today a conservative place. Conservative in the old-fashioned sense, meaning distrustful of rapid change, modest about what we can know and how effectively we can plan. That’s the way the bourgeoisie likes it. And sometimes it is the former radicals in clogs and ponytails who fight futuristic change most fiercely (just try building a big new project in Burlington or Berkeley.)

“If you’d been one of those radical bohemians (whether from the 1830s or the 1960s) sitting in your garret dreaming of

to the point where they are now threatened with extinction by the policies they have foisted on the nation as a whole. In seeing the moral dimension of the cultural revolution, Dresner differs from a mainstream Jew like Alan Dershowitz, who according to his own account, goes to synagogue on the high holydays but can’t make up his mind whether God exists. Dershowitz, who is also worried that Jews will shrink to a minuscule and insignificant segment of the American population by 2076, promotes the big tent theory of Judaism as a way of maximizing its power, something which causes him problems of definition. A Jew, according to Dershowitz, is not someone who necessarily believes in God; he doesn’t necessarily follow the law in any consistent fashion. He does not have to accept the testimony of the prophets. Because he wants to maximize the number of Jews, Dershowitz even rejects the racial definition of Jew as one born of a Jewish mother. According to Dershowitz:

““In America, and in other nations that separate church from state, one’s Jewishness is a matter of self-definition and anyone who revolution, you would loathe America at the start of the 21st century. On the other hand, if you'd been a Babbitt, one of the shopkeepers the radicals used to ridicule, you'd be pretty comfortable, all things considered. You'd like living in a country where business is celebrated, but where civic life is moderate and cautious. It might take a while to get used to all the executives who dress like aging rock stars, and you'd be shocked by what passes for popular culture, but you'd grow to appreciate a world that offered such a wonderful selection of whole-grain pastas, a spinoff of all those organic grocery stores that emerged from the Bay Area after the 1960s."

—David Brooks, The Weekly Standard, May 8, 2000, p. 25, 26

Q "The history of the last 40 years has been the history of increasing Jewish animus against Catholics, during which the Catholics have taken a beating defending the moral order. This battle stretches from the Catholic defeat in defending the Hollywood production code through the Ginsberg obscenity decision, wherein Philadelphia handed the pornography industry a defeat it never forgot, through Lemon V. Kurtzman, all the way to Hitler's Pope and the most recent academy awards ceremony with teary-eyed tributes to abortion propaganda and Billy Crystal making jokes about the pope. All of these battles have one thing in common, they were part of a struggle between Jews and Catholics over control of the culture which Catholics have lost on a consistent basis for going on 40 years now.

"Rabbi Samuel Dresner has taken note of this cultural struggle from the vantage point of a Jew who is outside of the mainstream of Jewish life, which is to say, from the point of view of a Jew who still believes in the Torah and the God who is its author. The results, according to Dresner, have been catastrophic in terms of the morals of the country. Jews, because they have wants to be considered a Jew or a half-Jew, or a partial Jew or a person of Jewish heritage has a right to be so considered (Alan M. Dershowitz, The Vanishing American Jew: In Search of Jewish Identity for the Next Century, p. 324)."

"So this means that anyone who defines himself as a Jew is a Jew, right? Wrong. Lest anyone slip into this view Dershowitz quickly draws the line: 'I do not mean to include former Jews who practice Christianity,' he adds in a footnote. So according to this view, a Jew is essentially an anti-Christian who has no core of beliefs of his own. Sigmund Freud was a Jew in spite of the fact that he was an atheist, and Edith Stein was not a Jew in spite of the fact that her mother was Jewish and she worshiped the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and died in a concentration camp with people who were there because they, like she, were considered Jews. Dershowitz is clearly uncomfortable with his position, even in the act of stating it because it reduces Judaism to nothing more than an anti-Christian ideology:

"Indeed, for many Jews the only factor that distinguishes Judaism from Christianity is a negative one: We reject Jesus as the Messiah. That is why we are so appalled by "Jews for Jesus." In addition to the often misleading proselytization, they also shove in our faces the uncomfortable fact that it is only the rejection of Jesus as Christ that really distinguished most Jews from mainline Christians. . . . Indeed it is fair to say that most American Jews, outside of the Orthodox, seem to have more in common even religiously with mainline Protestants than they do with the ultra-orthodox Hasidim. (Dershowitz, The Vanishing American Jew, p. 195)'"

From the President's Desk

Dr. David A. Noebel

From the Editor:

Most of our Journal readers understand that Summit Ministries is not 'politically correct' in any significant way. For any of our new readers who aren't sure, the following materials from the pen of Tony Snow will seal the verdict. It involves the issue of guns.

I can't help but believe that Tony Snow and John Lott have a pretty good handle on the subject.

The Snow comments are from The Washington Times (May 14, 2000, p. B1):

"Yale economist John Lott points out in the new edition of his controversial book, More Guns, Less Crime, our nation always has fostered a gun culture. Today, roughly 80 million Americans own a total of nearly 250 million firearms. If these folks were as violent as gun-control advocates allege, we would all be very dead. Instead, murder rates are on the decline – and rising gun ownership may have a lot to do with the trend.

"Before explaining how, let's look at the tragedies that worry the marching moms: accidental shootings and mass murders. Drawing on the most recent available statistics, Mr. Lott notes that 1,134 Americans died in accidental shootings during 1996. Only 42 of these victims were under the age of 10. That same year, 1,915 kids that age died in motor-compared to 27.6 percent in 1988.

Furthermore, the more [money] you make, the more likely it is that you have purchased a firearm lately. The new guns are not going to survivalists and drug thugs, but to law-abiding citizens with jobs and families.

"Proponents of gun control argue that new laws will build on this progress by preventing bad guys from procuring weapons. This sounds reasonable, until you consider that felons generally don't stride into a gun shop or show and obtain their arms by legal means.

"Thugs are rational. They pick on easy prey and avoid trouble. For example, the man who allegedly attacked the Jewish community center in Los Angeles did so only after concluding that security was too tight at more prominent Jewish sites.

"Mr. Lott argues that creeps back off in states that let citizens acquire permits to carry concealed weapons. Rates of murder, assault and burglary have fallen dramatically – and women have been the primary beneficiaries of this trend.

"Conversely, 'safe storage' laws – including trigger locks – give felons a sense of greater criminal liberty. Mr. Lott estimates that the laws are 'significantly related to almost 9 percent more rapes and robberies, and 5.6 percent more burglaries . . . [The] presence of the law in just . . . 15 states was associated with 3,600 more rapes, 22,500 more robberies and vehicle accidents; 489 died after getting hit by cars or trucks; 805 drowned; and 738 were killed by fire or burns.

Accidental shooting hit the lowest ever recorded. In recent years, Mr. Lott writes: 'Only about 30 people are accidentally killed by private citizens who mistakenly believe the victim to be an intruder. By comparison, police accidentally kill as many as 330 individuals annually.'

"The same applies to mass killings. Despite the shooting spree at Columbine High, school violence has fallen precipitously since the mid-1980s, and this year could be the safest in decades.

"It may surprise you to learn that this outbreak of peace has coincided with a veritable national gun-buying spree. The percentage of voters who own guns stands at nearly 40 percent, Q "New photographs of Elian Gonzalez, in the uniform of Cuba's communist youth Pioneers, taken at Wye Plantation in Maryland in the care of U.S. government chaperones, were cited by Miami exiles yesterday as 'further proof' that he is being brainwashed there by 'communist propaganda.'

"A spokesman said the Justice Department was not concerned about it.

"But the Cuban-Americans are. 'I think it's appalling that this kind of communist 64,000 more burglaries.'

"As many as 4 million Americans (and as few as 150,000, depending on the study) each year say they used a gun to fend off an attacker. So the question is how best to discourage bad people from shooting good ones.

"Trigger locks, waiting periods and registration laws aren't the ticket. They throw road blocks before lawful citizens and give gun-toting jerks the green light. If marching moms are more interested in making a difference than making noise, they ought to reconsider. A new gun-control law may give them a warm, toasty feeling during a presidential signing ceremony – but it could imperil them and their families for years."

propaganda would be allowed under the protection of the U.S. Marshals' Service right here in this country,' said Spencer Eig, an attorney hired by Elian's great-uncle, Lazaro Gonzalez, to seek political asylum in America for the boy.

"Mr. Eig, speaking to reporters in Miami yesterday, said another attorney for the family, Manny Daiz, was working on a letter to be sent to the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS).

“Granma, Cuba’s Communist Party daily, on Monday published five photographs showing Elian in the Pioneers uniform—a blue kerchief and a white shirt with a logo of Cuban patriot Jose Marti on his breast. Granma said the photographs were taken at the Maryland retreat where Elian has been staying, but did not say when.

“Since Elian arrived at Wye Plantation, several of Elian’s schoolmates from Cardenas, Cuba, have come to the United States to stay with the boy. Elian’s schoolteacher also came to continue the children’s lessons, along with a Cuban physician.

““As far as Elian is concerned, he is back in Cuba, pledging allegiance to the “Maximum Leader,”” said Frank Calzon of the Center for a Free Cuba. ‘He is in a Potemkin village with his teachers and schoolmates, learning to be Fidel’s “New Man,” selfless and obedient in the class struggle. We knew this was going to happen.’

“The Justice Department said that Elian’s clothing did not concern them. ‘We do not think it is up to us to comment on what Elian wears. He is continuing his education by the arrangement of his government,’ said Carole Florman, Justice Department spokeswoman. ‘We do not think there is anything inappropriate about it.’

“Cuba’s Pioneers were created on the model of groups in the former Soviet Union. Children join when they enter school and wear the uniform to school through the 12th grade. Children who refuse to join, for religious or other reasons, are ostracized. So are their parents.

“The Foundation for Human Rights in Cuba, an anti-Castro group in the United States, says that in Pioneers, children sing songs, take weekend trips and take a pledge saying, ‘We will be like Che,’ the guerrilla fighter Ernesto ‘Che’ Guevara.

“The Clinton administration this year labeled Cuba as one of the world’s worst human rights violators and a ‘terrorist regime.’ Nevertheless, the INS and the Justice Department insist that Elian’s father should be allowed to take him back to Cuba. Elian’s mother drowned trying to reach America with him, and he was rescued off Florida after floating on an inner tube for two days after their boat sank.”

—The Washington Times, May 18, 2000, p. 1

Q New photographs of Werner vonBraan, in the uniform of Hitler’s Nazi youth brown shirts, taken at Wye Plantation in Maryland in the care of U.S. government chaperones, were cited by Chicago exiles as ‘further proof’ that he is being brainwashed by Nazi propaganda.

A spokesman said the Justice Department was not only not concerned about it, but had just directed a ship load of Jews back to Germany for the extermination or survival of the fittest camps.

But the German-Americans are.

“I think it’s appalling that this kind of Nazi propaganda would be allowed under the protection of the U.S. Marshall’s Service right here in this country,” said Ludwig Eig, an attorney hired by Werner’s great uncle Hans vonBraan, to seek political asylum in America for the boy.

The Berlin Tageblott, Germany’s Nazi Party daily, on Monday published five photographs showing Werner in the Hitler Youth uniform—a black kerchief and brown shirt with a logo of German patriot Adolph Hitler on his breast. Tageblott said the photographs were taken at the Maryland retreat where Werner has been staying, but did not say when.

Since Werner arrived at Wye Plantation, several of Werner’s schoolmates from Munich, Germany have come to the United States to

“The foundation has reproduced pages from a Pioneer manual that instructs children, some as young as Elian, in games called ‘Bridge Attack,’ ‘Mine Layers,’ ‘Night Infiltration,’ ‘Eliminate the Sentry,’ ‘Coastal Infiltration,’ and ‘Throwing Grenades Through Windows.’

“Pioneers learn at camp to assemble and disassemble military rifles blindfolded.

“The Associated Press reported from Havana that Cuban youths are required to work to earn their ‘free education.’ From eighth grad through 10th grade, they spend 21 days a year doing some type of agricultural work – planting, picking or cutting crops such as tobacco, citrus, potatoes and tomatoes. In the 11th grade and 12 grade, they live at boarding schools in the countryside, and their days are split between studies and farm work.

“Ninoska Perez of the Cuban American National Foundation (CANF) said Pioneers are expected to inform on their parents if they say anything the government construes as critical of Cuba’s communist government.

““A student’s dossier is kept on the child that reflects not only academic standing but everything else associated with his social life,” wrote Martha Molina Puerto, a Cuban psychologist who fled Cuba in August 1999, in a document published by CANF. ‘This is one enormous apparatus around the child who lacks any freedom to express himself.’

stay with the boy. Werner’s school teachers, Joseph Geobbel’s wife Magela, also came to continue the children’s lessons on Mein Kampf and Darwin’s Origin of Species, along with a German physician, Wolfgang Himmler, who can determine Aryan bloodlines.

“As far as Werner is concerned, he is back in Germany, pledging allegiance to the Maximum Leader,’ said Heinrick Overmon of the Center for a Free Germany. “He is in a Potemkin village with his teacher and schoolmates, learning to be Hitler’s ‘New Aryan Man,’ selfless and obedient in the race struggle. We knew this was going to happen.”

The Justice Department said that Werner’s clothing did not concern them. “We do not think it is up to us to comment on what Werner wears. He is continuing his racial education by the arrangement of his government,’ said Carole Florman, Justice Department spokesman. Besides, said Ms. Florman – “Dutsch and Woodless has a great tune.”

Germany’s Hitler Youth were created on the model of groups in the Soviet Union. Children join when they enter school and wear the uniform to school through the 12th grade. Children who refuse to join, for religious or other reasons, are ostracized. So are their parents.

None of this, however phases the U. S. Justice Department or the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS). Six-year-old Werner must be returned to Germany where he will become a vital part of the Third Reich – maybe even an inventor of the V-I.

Q “Canada is a land that values tolerance so highly that it prosecutes those it deems intolerant. The historian David Irving has been banned from the country for his views on World War II. Now the Canadian Broadcast Standards Council (CBSC) is training its sights on Dr. Laura Schlessinger, the conservative radio moralist.

“The CBSC has just released a report charging that Dr. Laura’s views on homosexuality ‘may well fertilize the ground’ for violence against homosexuals, though it concedes that she disapproves of murder even more strongly than she disapproves of sodomy.

“Nevertheless, her disapproval of sodomy as ‘abnormal and deviant’ is bad enough: why, it’s ‘a quarter of century out of date in the opinion of professional psychiatric [associations].’ Not wrong, mind you; just, in some people’s ‘opinion,’ ‘out of date.’

“All Canadians or visitors to Canada, or broadcasters who beam their programs to Canada, have a moral obligation to promulgate opinions that are up to date, according to the current opinions of the psychiatric profession.

“Psychiatry isn’t much of a science; it ranks with phrenology in its analytical cogency and predictive power. But nobody can deny that it’s trendy. And that’s what counts for the CBSC. Morality is dictated by the iron law of fashion, and pretty ill-defined fashion at that.

“Dr. Laura takes a different view. She is an Orthodox Jew, and she upholds a moral code that has existed for thousands of years. That code has worked very well, sustaining Jewish and Christian communities through thick and thin.

“The same can’t be said for the New Morality, also known as the Sexual Revolution, which in three decades has amassed an incredibly destructive record of divorce, illegitimacy, disease, abortion, and crime. Homosexuality, especially the male “Hypocrisy? Yes. Double standards? Only superficially. At bottom, there is a real single standard at work here: ‘Absolute free speech for our side; no freedom at all for the enemy.’ What rights you have, or whether you have any rights at all, depends entirely on whether you are deemed ‘progressive’ (up to date) or ‘reactionary’ (attached to tradition).

“The progressive forces want to destroy freedom, yes, but their real goal is the destruction of normal life itself. That’s why they attach a sacramental importance to abortion as well as to the filthiest couplings imaginable.”

–Joseph Sobran, May 11, 2000, Online

Q “One of the problems of getting old is that you miss out on so many of the exciting things that young people enjoy. Often this is because what is new to them is something that has been tried again and again in the past – and has turned out to be a bummer again and again.

“One of the many idiotic ideas that reappear in our public schools in new verbal guises is the idea that the school should be preparing young people for the world of work. Since every old idea has to have a new name, this is now called the ‘school-to-work’ program, sponsored by the federal government and spending billions of tax dollars.

“This used to be called ‘vocational guidance’ and the idea goes back at least 90 years, when the gurus of so-called progressive education said that schools spent too much time on academic subjects and not enough time on ‘practical’ things that would be ‘relevant’ to the kind of work and life that students would go into after finishing school.

“In the latest reincarnation of vocational guidance as school-to-work programs, 8th graders are given tests to determine what kinds of jobs they are supposedly suited for and they kind, has proved an epidemic health and sanitation problem, just as one might expect from an abuse of sexual and excretory organs.

“How brainy do you have to be to foresee what’s likely to happen when a life-giving organ is inserted into the poop chute? Whose idea of love is that? Normal intercourse produces human life (also under attack); homosexual intercourse spawns only bacterial life.

“But I’d better be careful. I don’t want to wind up in a Canadian prison. As the CBSC report says ominously: ‘In Canada, we respect freedom of speech but do not worship it. Whether or not Americans are so protected in their country is a non-issue for the CBSC.’

“Right. Canada has to protect itself against such pernicious, hate-filled American notions as the Law of Moses. If Dr. Laura wants to spew the Ten Commandments, let her do it in her own country.

“It isn’t just Canada, of course. Organized Sodom in these United States is trying to block Dr. Laura from getting a TV show, on grounds that she stands for ‘hate’ – though for sheer rancid hate, the ‘gay’ groups themselves are hard to beat. Colleges and universities across the country are adopting ‘hate speech’ codes that punish the mildest criticism of homosexuals and other ‘minorities.’ The Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination cracks down on private businesses that, in its own opinion, ‘ridicule or create a racial stereotype and make certain people feel unwelcome.’

’ Even Major League Baseball now condemns errant speakers to ‘sensitivity training.’

“Liberals used to love free speech, waving the First Amendment as their banner. That was when they felt weak. Now that they hold positions of power, especially in academia, they’ve decided that some kinds of speech are asked to make career choices. Such choices are premature by at least a decade. Some of the best liberal arts colleges allow – and encourage – their students to take two years of general education in college before deciding what subject to major in.

“Such choices are too serious to make without some solid basis. You may be fascinated by chemistry experiments in high school, but that is very different from saying that you can master the difficult analytical skills required for majoring in chemistry in college. Every college has students who enroll in pre-med programs and end up majoring in sociology.

“What did you really know about careers when you were in the 8th grade? I didn’t even know what an economist was and had never heard of a think tank, such as the Hoover Institution, where I have worked for 20 years. Nor is it at all realistic to expect school teachers to have any such encyclopedic knowledge of the thousands of occupations out there today, much less what the trends are for various fields in the years ahead, when these 8th graders will be working adults.

“When meteorologists have trouble predicting the weather five days ahead and financial experts can get clobbered in the stock market, what in the world would lead anybody to seriously expect school teachers to predict the world in which their 8th graders will be living, decades from now? The high rates of obsolescence of jobs and skills dooms any such efforts.

“In an age when ‘educators’ seem to be constantly trying to find things to do instead of educating, school-to-work is just another of those irresponsible self-indulgences which create the illusion that they are doing something useful, when in fact they are wasting precious time and spreading confusion among the young.

“It is worse than that. School-to-work mustn't be tolerated. Homosexuals may defile churches and insult a cardinal with obscenities, but the mildest disapproval of sodomy itself must be crushed.

programs are also indoctrination programs for politically correct views about careers. They test for attitudes as well as aptitudes. Once you start playing little tin god, micro-managing other people's lives, it is hard to know where to stop."

—Thomas Sowell, Jewish World Review, May 26, 2000
